North Steyne Nippers dig deep for country kids

Members of the North Steyne Nippers have delivered dozens of presents to the doors of Royal Far West Children's Health Scheme this Christmas.

Singing ponies and colourful trikes were among the generous gifts donated by the club early this week. The gifts were presented to children currently staying at the Royal Far West complex in Manly.

Royal Far West CEO Jann Kingston said children at the complex were receiving treatment for a range of conditions such as developmental and behavioural delays.

"Typically, these children come from remote and rural parts of NSW where access to specialist medical care is limited," Ms Kingston said.

"Generous donations - such as these gifts from the North Steyne Nippers - mean the time these patients spend at Manly is memorable and they have something special to take home this Christmas," Ms Kingston said.

"Many of our families come from areas where the drought and other factors have had a devastating economic impact.

Gestures such as this ease their load and will help the families to enjoy the Christmas season," she said.
